

Product recall of selected breaded fish fillet products that may contain an undeclared milk allergen – see list below

June 12, 2017: High Liner Foods is recalling selected breaded fish fillets due to notification from one of its U.S.-based ingredient suppliers that certain ingredients supplied to the company may contain an undeclared milk allergen.

People with an allergy to milk should not consume the recalled products listed below. Use of such products may cause a serious or life threatening allergic reaction in consumers that are sensitive to milk. These products are sold by retailers, distributors and foodservice establishments such as hotels, restaurants, cafeterias, hospitals and nursing homes in both Canada and the United States. The affected products only apply to product codes where milk is not declared on the label.

A full listing of the recalled products is noted below.
